Planned Parenthood Sues to Block Defunding

February 22nd, Ohio Governor John Kasich signed House Bill 294 to block abortionists in Ohio from qualifying for five funding programs administered by the Ohio Department of Health. The bill redirects state-administered grants—approximately $1.3 million last year—away from Planned Parenthood and other abortion providers.

The law was scheduled to go into effect May 23rd, despite Planned Parenthood filing suit May 11th in federal court to block it from being enforced. Planned Parenthood says the cuts do not close any of its 28 facilities in Ohio, but do reduce funds for some non-abortion programs. Government funding for any Planned Parenthood program is misuse of citizens' tax dollars to prop up the abortion industry. The law does not affect Medicaid reimbursements, a large source of government funding, which still goes to this leading abortion chain.

Ohio Senate Passes Dangerous End of Life Bill

May 4th, the Ohio Senate voted on Senate Bill 165, Medical Orders for Life Sustaining Treatment (MOLST) and passed the measure 30-3. The bill, sponsored by Senator Peggy Lehner (Dayton) would establish a MOLST form for Ohio—a protocol created and promoted by pro-euthanasia groups—to replace Ohio's already existing do not resuscitate (DNR) orders. Senators who recognized the bill's problems and voted against it were Senate president Keith Faber, and Senators LaRose and Jordan. The bill now goes to the Ohio House.

A growing coalition of 30 pro-life organizations, oppose MOLST for both patients and those who must implement it. Leaders across the state testified against the bill including Cincinnati Right to Life's Executive Director, Paula Westwood; legislative consultant Barry Sheets; and board member and President, Terri Schiavo Life & Hope Network, Bobby Schindler. Contact your Ohio state representatives to stop S.B. 165 from becoming Ohio law (see action brochure Protecting Life Till Last Breath: Oppose S.B. 165 Ohio MOLST at CincinnatiRighttoLife.org).

ODH Hearing on Dayton Women's Med Center

April 26th, the Ohio Department of Health conducted its hearing on Women's Med Center Dayton's lack of transfer agreement, which prompted ODH Director Rick Hodges to revoke its license. Attorney Jennifer Branch represented abortionist Martin Haskell and this facility. John Waverley from Attorney General Mike DeWine's office represented the state of Ohio. Bill Kopko was objective examiner. Closing briefs and rebuttals are to be filed, with all finished by July 11th for the examiner to review then submit his decision on the license revocation to Director Hodges. Meanwhile, business continues as usual at Women's Med Center Dayton, with Rosyln Kade performing abortions.

Religious Liberty and Zubick vs. Burwell

May 16th, the US Supreme Court declined to issue a ruling in Zubik v. Burwell, the Little Sisters of the Poor's and other plaintiffs' conscience rights case opposing President Obama's health law requirement that they provide contraceptive coverage in their healthcare programs. In an unusual move, the Court sent Zubik v. Burwell back to lower courts, asking those courts to determine whether a compromise could be reached that would satisfy the plaintiffs. Plaintiffs and supporters are cautiously optimistic as the lower courts' decisions remain to be seen and the case could eventually reach the Supreme Court again, which will be after recently deceased Justice Scalia's vacancy is filled.

Investigative Reporters Seek Charges Dismissed

April 14th, Thomas More Society attorneys for undercover journalists David Daleiden and Sandra Merritt filed a “motion to quash,” that is, to dismiss indictments from a Harris County, Texas, grand jury, charging the reporters with crimes during investigation of Planned Parenthood officials negotiating the sale of aborted babies’ body parts. Rather than indict Planned Parenthood for crimes, such as selling aborted babies’ remains for profit and altering abortion methods to yield more profitable “specimens,” the grand jury instead indicted David and Sandra for using false identification and allegedly attempting to purchase human organs as purchasers for a biomedical company. Even other investigative journalists oppose these indictments, as undercover actions routinely expose the truth.

Research Project to Reverse Brain Death

Philadelphia-based biotech company Bioquark has received permission from the National Institutes of Health and the country of India to begin a medical trial in India to try to regenerate the brains of people diagnosed brain dead. Such persons’ bodies can often still circulate blood, digest food, excrete waste, gestate and deliver a baby, and more. While other recent studies indicate that some electrical activity and blood flow continues after brain cell death, just not enough to allow for the whole body to function. Through its ReAnima Project, Bioquark is recruiting 20 patients being kept alive solely through life support to undergo procedures to try to revive their brains in a process similar to how some reptiles and marine organisms regenerate lost limbs.

California Hospital May Reject Assisted-Suicide

October of last year, California became the fifth state to legalize physician-assisted suicide. Now medical leaders at Huntington Hospital in Pasadena have voted to amend the hospital’s medical rules and prohibit its personnel to participate in the law, go into effect June 9th. Huntington will permit doctors to give patients who request it information about the law and/or to provide referrals to others who may participate outside of Huntington Hospital. If the board of directors approves the proposed amendment, Huntington will be one of the largest nonreligious affiliated medical providers in the state to refuse to help patients commit suicide.

DNR Issued for Minors Without Parents’ Consent

A recent Journal of Medical Ethics article documents results of a U.S. survey of neonatologists regarding “unilateral” Do Not Attempt Resuscitation (DNAR) or DNR orders, made without parental consent. Researchers emailed an anonymous survey to 3000 members of the American Society of Pediatrics Section of Perinatal Medicine. Of those who responded, 77% said it is ethically permissible to issue a unilateral DNR order for infants for whom survival is believed impossible; 61% if infants’ survival believed ‘unlikely’; 57% if no curative treatment is available. Kansas is seeking to counter such decisions with Simon’s Law, named for an infant born with Trisomy 18 who died due a DNR order without parental consent and protect such children, from medical discrimination, overriding parent’s rights, and death due to pediatric specialists claiming an “ethical” basis for denying care.

In Utero Abnormalities May Self Correct

Scientists from the University of Cambridge, the Wellcome Trust Sanger Institute and the University of Leuven, Belgium, have conducted experiments using mice to evaluate babies diagnosed with abnormalities in utero or during in vitro fertilization. The scientists found that such babies are often born healthy, without any abnormalities if allowed to live and develop, i.e., there is a natural process where many early-diagnosed abnormalities self-correct. They even found that when half of an early-stage embryo’s cells are abnormal, the embryo can fully repair itself.

Scientists Breeding Human Embryos

Research teams in the United States and the United Kingdom have reportedly grown human embryos to 13 days old, the longest record to date. Scientists stopped short of a 14-day limit that nations have imposed, restricting the time a newly conceived child may be kept alive in a laboratory. Despite ethical problems with growing and breeding human beings for experimentation and death, researchers claim this will help them observe newly conceived humans after implantation in the womb would have occurred, and will help them better understand and address issues with in vitro fertilization, miscarriages, birth defects, cellular engineering, and regeneration. Now some scientists want to extend the time artificially conceived human beings can be kept alive for research purposes.

Indiana Dignity for the Unborn Bill

March 25th Indiana Gov. Mike Pence signed the state’s Dignity for the Unborn Bill, which prohibits aborting disabled unborn babies, making Indiana only the second state after North Dakota with such a ban. Also under the bill babies may not be aborted because they are an undesired sex or race, and aborted or miscarried babies must be interred or cremated after abortion centers were discovered contracting with waste management companies that burn aborted babies as bio-hazard medical waste. The bill prohibits transporting an aborted baby in or out of Indiana except for final disposition; perinatal hospice information must be given to parents who receive a poor prenatal diagnosis; and women must be counseled before abortion in private, not in a group. Planned Parenthood has sued to halt the law before it goes into effect in July.

Arkansas Knows Words Matter for Life

Words matter, especially for those at risk for abortion and other assaults on human life. For example, pro-life vs. pro-abortion are more accurate terms than anti-abortion vs. pro-choice. Thus it is an impressive precedent that under orders from state lawmakers, the Medical Board voted to replace the term “fetus” with “unborn child” or “unborn human individual” in already implemented abortion regulating laws. January of this year, the Arkansas Medical Board had presented its own wording governing abortion for these laws—editing lawmakers’ language to “fetus” because it said this is an accepted medical term, while “unborn child” is not. A subcommittee of the Arkansas Legislative Council sent the edits back to the board with direction to restore lawmakers’ original wording clarifying “unborn child.”

South Dakota Strengthens Informed Consent Before Abortion

South Dakota has strengthened an existing law requiring abortionists to fully inform women before abortion. Now abortionists must tell women that abortion ends the life “of a whole, separate, unique, living human being.” They must accurately describe the development of an unborn child at his/her gestational age, and explain all physical and psychological abortion risks. Women must be given the “accurate rate of deaths due to abortions,” and those considering a chemical abortion must be told that even after taking the first pill, a chemical abortion can be reversed. Already under South Dakota law, at least 24 hours before abortion, a woman must be

CCV Action Makes Letters-to-the-Editor Easy

CCV (Citizens for Community Value) Action has created an online tool to help citizens easily create and submit letters to the editor of many news outlets. If you click on the name of a newspaper, you are directed to a website giving the paper's phone number, fax, and physical address. An online submission link takes you directly to the newspaper's website where you can submit an attached document or the text itself. ## ACLU Campaign Against Catholic Hospitals

A recent ACLU report finds that Catholic hospitals make up 15%, or 548, of the country's hospitals. All Catholic hospitals operate under the U.S. Bishops' Ethical and Religious Directives for Catholic Health Care Services, which ban abortion, sterilization and emergency contraception. The ACLU is claiming that following this doctrine regarding reproductive care puts women at risk. The ACLU is demanding that the federal government issue a statement through its Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services that denying emergency "reproductive health care" violates federal law, and to also investigate Catholic hospitals for violating the Emergency Medical Treatment & Labor Act (EMTALA).
